Governor Jay Nixon Makes Appearance

by Jess Salmond; Stephens City, Scott County and Kelsey Potter; Drake City, Johnson County

Last night, our Missouri Girl State Governor introduced our Missouri State Governor, Jay Nixon during the fifth assembly. The crowd exploded with applause, then silenced as he took a quick sip of water and spoke, calling Girls State a “wonderful tradition.”

“Don’t go home as the same person who came here,” said Nixon.

Governor Nixon began his speech talking about his past saying he was born and raised in Desoto, Missouri. He went on to talk about his elementary education and his college experience where he attended the University of Missouri-Columbia, earning his undergraduate and law degrees. His father was the Mayor of his hometown and his mother was President of the school board. It was Jay’s job to answer the phone for his parents and tell them what the citizenen needed help with. His parents would then discuss the best ways in which they could give their help.

He went on further to discuss his main issues.

He is trying to help college students from middle class families to pay for college. He shared that he believed training workers better would lead to getting better health care. He elaborated on his view that the government needed to provide certain services.

Governor Nixon then went on to express his views about the current politicians. He believed that the leadership quality needs to be improved, and our generation will be crucial to that improvement. He said that too many politicians argue and fight over one single issue instead of debating. Being a one issue voter is not productive, in the governor’s opinion.

“The opportunity to come to Girls State comes with responsibility,” told Nixon. “Your generation will be the first fully functioned digital generation,” he explained. He then elaborated on this statement, telling us that this responsibility should not be a crutch and that we should use all the information available to us.

“True leadership, true service is people who have values and beliefs for the collective,” he said. “You are the cream of the crop from across the state,” he stated. He then encouraged us to take this opportunity to meet others.

All of the MGS delegates were silent and respectful during his speech.

After a few questions from our girls, Nixon began to wrap up his session for the night. “Don’t go home as the same person who came here,” he commanded, “but as leaders in the community.”

Important Announcement!

The Anthony City Bees are trying to clean up cities across Girls State. They have placed boxes designated for recycling in the dining hall for easy access.

Anthony Bees challenge you to drop off all of those empty bottles and cans, and help them make Girls State a truly beautiful and green place to live!

A Simple Heart

By Emma Hawes; Bradley City, Dewitt County

Humble words came out in every sentence of Lynda Smith Baumgartner's speech. She was not afraid to admit that she grew up poor. As proof, she brought her doll that was the only purchased Christmas gift she had as a child. Baumgartner simply stated, "If you are not happy with your life, then fix it." Hardwork is a character builder of what you want in life. During her college years, she started traveling overseas to do mission work. On one of her trips, they took a group of children, who had never been out of their village, to Lake Mary: Baumgartner declared, "It was a blessing to see children smile about something simple." The children are constantly looking over their siblings and cannot enjoy their childhood. Children who participate in the foreign exchange student program in Columbia can find a home in the Baumgartner Household. One former student not only visits them frequently but was in her son's wedding. After her speech, girls walked up to her like she was a rock star to ask questions about religious and non-religious mission work. Baumgartner never plans on retiring.

"It's a joy to serve others." Lynda Baumgartner's speech motivated and inspired MGS delegates to get out and help less priviledged individuals. photo by Karly Jones

General Assembly Preps for Jefferson City

By Mykah Murphy; Duggan City, Johnson County

It was merely three days ago that 766 girls from across the state were bursting with excitement, awaiting their arrival for the 2009 session of Missouri Girls State. Today, however, 133 of those girls are experiencing a similar anxiety and anticipation of leaving. Those girls made up the 2009 Missouri Girls State House of Representatives and Senate, and they spent today at the Missouri State Capital in Jefferson City.

"Honestly, the trip is the whole reason I decided to run for House of Representatives," says delegate Brianna Schnakenberg of Blair City, Davidson County. "I've taken a trip similar to this with my school, and I'm excited to get a more in-depth experience by returning with Girls State."

Those young women will move through a very full schedule today, including activities such as touring the Capital building, interacting with numerous Missouri State Representative, eating at the American Legion Hall, and participating in a mock session held on the official floor of the Missouri House of Representatives. This is an honor reserved for only a few organizations, including MGS, and the House itself.

When asked what about the trip she had been looking forward to, Taylor Jordan of Compton City, Bacon County replied, "Meeting the most powerful people in Missouri." Allie Mends also from Compton City, Bacon County, said simply, "The food!"

Today will surely make a lasting impression on these ladies. Who knows? This may end up being the first of many trips to the Capital for the future Missouri Legislatures among us.

First Filing

By Mollie Blum; Cockrill City, Dewitt County

Beep. Beep. Beep. The sound many girls heard just after sunrise yesterday morning. As they got ready for another day at MGS, some girls made their way downstairs to file for a state office.

In the midst among eager delegates, Madeline Brick of Cockrill City, DeWitt County, who filed for the state office of Governor. Madeline explained that she came from a town of 1000 people so filing for such a high position was exhilarating.

"This would be a fantastic way to meet amazing girls from all over the state!" exclaimed Madeline.

Today was the final day to sign up for state position. The final slate for each party will be announced in tomorrow morning's assembly.

How To....

talk your way out of a ticket

by Kayleigh Ellison; Crowder City, Dewitt County

After recently being “pulled over” by a county law enforcement official, being citation, and being able to talk it down to a warning, delegates provide tips to help you talk your way out of a potential ticket.

1 STEP

Demand to know your accusation because it’s your right to know anyway.

2 STEP

Contest the validity! For example, when a delegate was accused of illegal chalk use, they informed the law enforcement officer that she was within her legal grounds.

- If they then change their accusation, question “Why me?” as dramatically as possible and move to step 3.

3 STEP

Shameless begging and pleading! When it’s clear they are ticketing for the sake of ticketing, what else can you do? Using phrases such as, “So why am I getting this ticket?” with a look of a broken heart and astonishment.

- Officer: ”Look, my friends made me leave my ice-cream cone to ticket you so I’m sorry but I have to.”

Accused: “Oh, umm, ok (make eyes water here) yeah I understand I just didn’t know I broke a rule and I don’t typically get in trouble (fidgeting is a nice touch...makes you seem emotionally distraught) I totally get it though, we’ll stop and we’ll leave now.

(Leave in the most pathetic way humanly possible).

“No One is Better Than You & No One is Worse!” Guest Speaker Inspires Delegates

by Amber Taylor; Adreon City, Johnson County

After this morning’s guest speaker Rachel Storch walked to the podium, she began her speech talking about, not politics, but about goose bumps. Storch said her goose bumps came from thinking about all the opportunities and excitement that come along with MGS.

Storch found her first opportunity to work in politics several years after graduating from college and taking a job with Senator Mel Carnahan and then his wife, Jean Carnahan. From there, Miss Storch was elected to the Missouri House of Representatives.

Since starting her position in the House of Representatives, Storch served on various committees where she learned that despite differing opinions on certain subjects by political parties, neither party is right and neither party is wrong because no one party has a monopoly on the truth.

Storch advised delegates to take knowledge gained from MGS and utilizing all the opportunities that cause her goose bumps to use; She encouraged participants to seek internships and opportunities and be aggressive when working toward a meaningful goal.

“No one is better than you and no one is worse than you,” Miss Storch said. “You have just as much voice as the next person.”

Goosebumps! Rachel Storch talked to MGS delegates about how many chills she had returning this year to speak. Storch encouraged participants to seek internships and opportunities and be aggressive when working toward a meaningful goal. photo by Karley Jones

The Mission Well

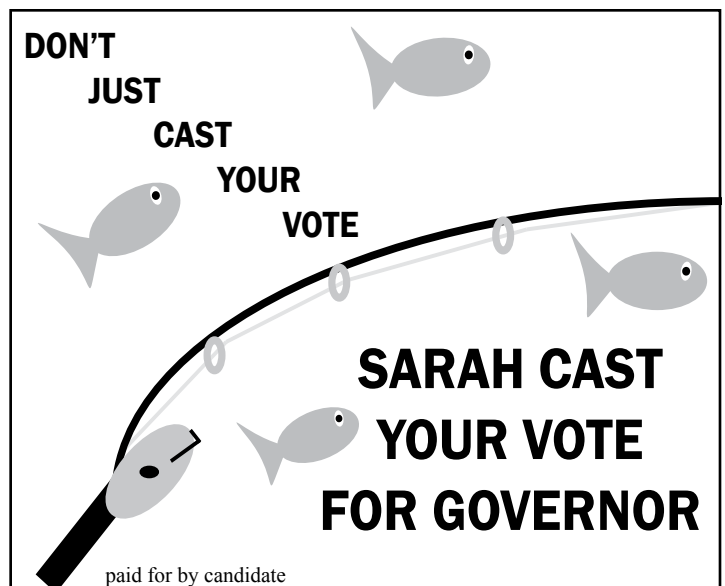

by Emma Hawes; Bradley City, Bacon County

In the dear town of Bradley, the center of the town displays a fountain. Once a member of our county takes a drink the water will flow for 15 minutes.

We have passed a law that no one can use this fountain because it is not eco-friendly and it is wasteful. But for now, it is the new home for the Mission Well.

If you come by Bradley, please put your change in the fountain. Don't worry it goes to a great cause. We will donate our change to The Mission Continues.
